

Report of Counseling Case for 2016-2017:

Career confusion:

Tanmay was a young enthusiastic teenager who liked new challenges in his life. He took computer science subjects as he was very much interested in programming and gaming. He opted for computer science, as it was exciting and new development were happening all the time. But after a year in the course, his interest started dwindling. He didnt have a clue what to do.

He came for career counseling. He wanted to know, "what else he was good at..". The counselor suggested him to take few assessment tests ie., physcometric tet to find out what other natural abilities he had in him. After going through a series of assessments, he found out that he wanted to become an entrepreneur.

He enrolled himself in a course designed to help him in honing his business skills and gain expertise.

Today, he is happy that he found a new direction in his life and was gearing himself to move forward with reinforced confidence.
